

TEXTILE DESIGNER

Gabriel's ambassador and the customer's advisor

You will have a central position with DesignMaster, Gabriel's department for design and product development. Here we design the upholstery materials, furniture and furniture components of the future, focusing on users' needs, behaviour and wishes. The design and development tasks cover everything from ideas to the final product, and you will be working closely with internal and external customers and suppliers.

Your primary areas of responsibility will be:

- Fabric and upholstery design
- Trends and user analyses
- Concept and product development
- Identification and implementation of projects from ideas to the finished product
- Product presentation and launches.

You will act as Gabriel's ambassador and the customer's advisor in close cooperation with customers and colleagues. Your job will be to identify and develop product ideas and carry out design tasks where you will have plenty of opportunities to make good use of your knowledge of textiles. Sales support and developing presentation materials for Gabriel's A-list customers will also be part of your responsibilities.

Ambitious and professionally grounded with good people skills

You have relevant education in design and a minimum of three years' experience in a similar position, or you may have worked as a freelance designer with particular focus on upholstery textiles and similar products. You have a broad knowledge of materials and insight into textile construction principles within weaving, which enable you to both design and deliver tasks and projects at a professional level.

You have experience of developing and visualising design concepts and functional requirements through the use of IT tools, and you are also used to working with digital presentations.

You are creative, innovative and used to working independently on your own tasks, but you also know the value of being part of an efficient team. Your high levels of energy and your focus on quality make you a natural sparring partner for your customers and colleagues.

You are a strong communicator who enjoys engaging in dialogue with colleagues, customers and suppliers in an outgoing role where the user, the application and the presentation are a natural part of the design process. You are comfortable communicating and making presentations in English, the company language at Gabriel A/S.
